Overview

The William Eckhardt Research Center is a 277,000 gross square foot building with a basement, sub-basement above grade floors. The building houses offices, conference rooms and laboratories for the Division of Physical and the Institute of Molecular Engineering. The specific Physical Science Units include Astronomy & Astrophysics, the Kavli Institute for Cosmological Physics. The building also houses the Pritzker Nanofabrication Cleanroom.

The North Science Quadrangle has been created in the space to the west of the building featuring boulders, trees, vegetation, and winding paver paths.
